. Objectives of the Practice:

- To provide financial assistance to economically weaker class students.
- To create interest among the economically weaker class students for higher education.
- To avoid the dropout of students from higher education.
- To enable poor students to fulfill their dream through education.

The Context:

Bahraich is an aspirational district of terai region of Uttar Pradesh and based on agriculture. A large number of rural population faced flood and other disaster. There is a wider economic disparity in society. Our institution believes in social responsibility. Therefore, there is a need for equal educational opportunities. Our college has a social consciousness. So, the college provides financial assistance to students from economically weaker classes.

The Practice:

The college provides this unique service to the students. Most of our students belong to Rural and semi-urban areas. Providing economic assistance to such students really helps to increase the number of students. They could take admission and complete their higher education. If the students from the poor classes get educated, they will help to improve society. They will become economically independent. It will be a service to the nation.

Evidence of Success:

Many poor students could have completed their higher education and they are giving their own contribution to society. Many of our students are working in different parts of the country and worldwide and giving services in different fields. Many other students are doing their own small businesses. We are happy to provide education to the last part of society. We are also happy that our students from the tribal area are improving their socio-economic status.

Problems Encountered and Resources Required;

Even though we are providing financial assistance to our students, this assistance is not enough for them. So, there is a requirement for more funds for this activity.
